Overview

Sex crimes involving children present unique challenges to the attorney for the accused. From identifying the favorable and unfavorable jurors during voir dire, to presenting and challenging expert testimony at each phase of the trial, to recognizing and dealing with unique evidentiary issues, this genre of case is like no other. This seminar is designed to provide criminal defense attorneys the latest developments in case law and techniques to assist them in effectively representing citizens accused of this type of offense. The program will include lawyers with extensive experience litigating sex cases involving child victims as well as experts from other fields who frequently provide testimony and other assistance in these types of cases.
